

SPARKS IN THE NIGHT

Josh sparked the wick and ran for the surrounding forest...

...Blazing, a fat boy was becoming an ever increasing problem with the police state cracking down on even the most basic of civil liberties.

Then as Josh continued running towards the darkness of the forest, he saw a blinding white light emanating. He joked to himself it must have been an alien waiting for him until he got closer to the light, and when he finally saw the source of the light, even he himself could not believe what it was.

The doors of heaven looked less impressive then Josh had imagined. As an angel met him at the giant golden gate, Josh wasn't sure what had happened. At least he was safe now, and would be spending eternity in heaven and in the protection of the angles.

The End.